Globalisation for the Common Good Initiative An Inter-faith Perspective on Globalisation

An Introduction & Mission statement

Looking at our TV screens, reading newspapers and listening to news on the radios, fills us with anxiety and despair about the role of religion in the age of globalisation, as well as the relationship between East and West. In these turbulent times, it seems that the term “religion” is so often hijacked by the proponents of its very antithesis-namely, conflict and strife.

However, we must not despair. We must remain positive and hopeful. In times- not only of an unprecedented intensity of international and individual antagonisms and conflict- but also of signs of a widening departure from spiritual values, it is heartening to see that numerous people-from all faith communities- are working hard within different projects to reverse this trend of self-destruction, building bridges of reconciliation and peace across cultures and civilisations; to prevent what has sadly been termed as a clash of civilisations. An example of such work is Globalisation for the Common Good Initiative.

As it has been observed by many throughout history, religion has been both a source of blessing and curse. Religion has been, and is, a major factor in many conflicts and wars around the world. There is a real danger now that these unwelcome truths about the true meaning and function of religion, combined with political/economic injustice, human rights abuses, poverty, xenophobia, fear, ignorance, globalisation and war as an instrument of imperial policy, will aggravate conflicts and intolerance leading to anarchy around the world.

Committed to spirituality, compassion and respect for others, truly religious people must not allow their religion to be hijacked and abused in this way by exclusivist ideologues. We must make a stand together for peace, understanding, mutual respect, dialogue and justice. We must welcome religious diversity and concede that no single religion can claim a monopoly of Truth. Indeed, at this time in our history and journey- facing globalisation, global warming, aids, poverty, injustice and more- we need each other far more than in the past, and the future of our world demands that we teach to our students, parishioners and communities the value and benefits of dialogue, co-operation and interdependence.

In order to provide a better understanding of the role of religions in the age of globalisation, in 2002, in Oxford, a small and humble movement, “Globalisation for the Common Good” came into being. This movement is for “Rekindling the Human Spirit and Compassion in Globalisation”. We wanted to have an alternative to the current dominant economic/free trade globalisation and to make globalisation good for all. We wished to be a path from competition to association and cooperation. We wanted to demonstrate that, although as it seems, capitalism looks like it has won the day, nonetheless, if it suffers from some kind of moral and spiritual bankruptcy, then, it is not going to last.

Our movement found many dedicated and committed friends around the world. From Oxford we went to St. Petersburg, Russia, then to Dubai. In 2005 we were in Kenya. This year we are meeting at Chaminade University in Honolulu. In 2007 we will meet in Istanbul at Fatih University. Future conferences are currently under consideration.

Globalisation for the Common Good mission is to promote ethical, moral and spiritual values into the areas of economics, commerce, trade and international relations amongst others, as well as personal virtues, to advance understanding and action on major global issues by civil society, the private enterprise, the public sector, governments, and national and international institutions, leading to the promotion of collaborative policy solutions to the challenges posed by globalisation. We are committed to the idea that the marketplace is not just an economic sphere, 'it is a region of the human spirit'. Whilst considering the many economic questions and issues we should also reflect on the Divine dimension of life, and should, in contrast to what is practised today, be concerned with the world of heart and spirit. We view the problem and challenge of globalisation not only from an economic point of view, but also from ethical, spiritual and theological perspectives.

We affirm our conviction that a genuine inter-faith dialogue and co-operation is a significant way of bringing the world together; leading to the creation of a harmonious environment needed to build a world of peace, justice and prosperity for all. The call for Globalisation for the Common Good is an appeal to our essential humanity to deal with some of the most pressing concerns of peoples the world over.

Religion has always been a major factor in the growth of human civilisation. Business and wealth creation when they are for a noble reason are blessed and vital for human survival.

Bringing religions and business together for the common good will empower us with humanity, spirituality and love. It will raise us above pessimism to an ultimate optimism; turning from darkness to light; from night to day; from winter to spring. This spiritual ground for hope at this time of wanton destruction of our world, can help us recognise the ultimate purpose of life and of our journey in this world.

Kamran Mofid,
Founder,
Globalisation for the Common Good Initiative

Greetings, Welcome and Thank You

Dear Colleagues and Friends,

It is our pleasure and honour to welcome you to the conference. In these global and too often troubled times, we need new perspectives and models so that we can find humane answers to the challenge of globalisation, based on a profound respect for the diversity of cultures and religions in our world community. As global events demonstrate, there is a desperate need to reintroduce spirituality, ethics, morality and faith into the debate on globalisation.

Looking at the conference programme, without doubt and hesitation, we can see that our accomplished speakers have risen well to this challenge. The conference is truly privileged to have speakers of this calibre, sharing their views with us. Without them there would have been no conference, and with them, we hope we can travel together to heal the troubled and torn cultures of our time and pave the way to global justice, peace and harmony. We wish to express the conference's respect and sincere gratitude to each of our presenters for their extraordinary commitment in being a part of this vital effort by giving their time and expertise freely. Each one of our speakers brings a missing and essential piece that completes the process, leading to a better understanding of what globalisation is all about. Hopefully, together, we can clearly argue for and insist on social and economic alternatives that address the roots of global injustice and inhumanity, leading to Globalisation for the Common Good.

We are also grateful to and thank all the conference delegates who have come from near and far to be with us. It is wonderful for academics and non-academics to get involved and engaged with one another, so that we can all share each other's varied experiences. All of us must be given a voice to be heard.

We are grateful to and thank our Local Organising Committee (LOC) in Hawaii. Space alone has kept us from naming all of them. They have given their time, expertise and know-how as volunteers to Globalisation for the Common Good. We thank them all. We are however, particularly grateful to Chaminade University for hosting the 2006 conference and for all their generous support and encouragements. In particular we would like to thank the Marianist Community, Dr. Sue Wesselkamper, Chaminade's President and Brother Bernie Ploeger, executive Vice President and Provost. Special thanks are due to Dean Frank (Dino) McGinnis, our conference manager, website designer and administrator. He has worked very hard- well above the call of duty- ensuring our comfort and a successful conference. Finally, we thank our mutual good friend, Dr. Josef Boehle for his continuous hard work in maintaining the commongood website.

This week, all of us, experienced and newcomers, young and old, students and teachers together will form a community, committed to exploring and debating visions and ideas for celebrating diversity, appreciating uniqueness, enabling us to transform disagreements into understanding and mutual respect.

In addition to keynote and plenary sessions, as well as workshops, there will be opportunities for informal spontaneous meetings and dialogue between participants all through the week. This, we sincerely hope will result in invaluable collaborative learning experiences and networking as well as rich personal interactions. Please try to participate also in the cultural and social activities to cement further the newly formed friendships. We hope you will take full advantage of all these activities.

In conclusion, we invite you to share a common belief in the potential of each one of us to become self-directed, empowered, and active in defining this time in the world as opportunity for positive change and healing and for the true formation of a culture of peace by giving thanks, spreading joy, sharing love, seeing miracles, discovering goodness, embracing kindness, practicing patience, teaching tolerance, encouraging laughter, celebrating diversity, showing compassion, turning from hatred, practicing forgiveness, peacefully resolving conflicts, communicating non-violently, choosing happiness and enjoying life.

Have a wonderful conference.

Have a wonderful time.

Conflict resolution in international affairs is currently undergoing enormous pressures, due in part to the challenges of globalisation and its many cultural, religious and economic contexts. To address this crisis, which has sadly been described as a “Clash of Civilisations”, we propose a dialogue among civilisations: an inter-active international symposium to contribute meaningfully to the promotion of a global culture of prevention and non-violent conflict resolution, mediation and negotiation.

Today’s world of globalisation is marked by immense wealth and acute poverty. Moreover, total concentration on wealth creation and economic growth – without our knowing how or why – has led to an erosion of moral and spiritual values. It has also resulted in a destructive decline in the institutions that have traditionally promoted and protected these essential human values: the family, religious institutions and community structures. There is a growing a poverty of values such as love, compassion, justice, morality, solidarity, spirituality and faith, alongside an increase of materialism and consumerism in many parts of the world. And when social justice and human rights are routinely denied for the seemingly invisible amongst us, peace remains only a dream. We believe there is an alternative, based on the moral and spiritual values shared by all the world religions. The mystic tradition in every faith affirms that all of life is sacred. The most powerful way for faith-based and spiritual communities to influence beliefs, norms and institutions is through a prophetic voice and public action. Highly visible faith and interfaith affirmation of the great spiritual truths of peace, justice and the sacredness of the Earth and human life can make a tremendous contribution to the non-violent path of conflict resolution and the creation of a world that is just, free and prosperous. Action and service by spiritual and faith communities and groups can provide a vital source of inspiration and energy for the healing of the world.

Call for Papers

Papers, pre-organised panels, and roundtable submissions are invited from observers, commentators, academics, post-graduate students and NGOs to address issues related to globalisation and non-violent conflict resolution within the identified theme of the conference. Individuals may propose linked panels, panels or papers.

We specifically welcome papers from economists, businesspersons, philosophers, theologians, historians, political scientists with an interest in international relations, political theory or political economy, sociologists, psychologists, medical professionals, peace researchers, conflict resolution specialists, lawyers, environmentalists and geographers, as well as those engaged in inter-faith in action projects.

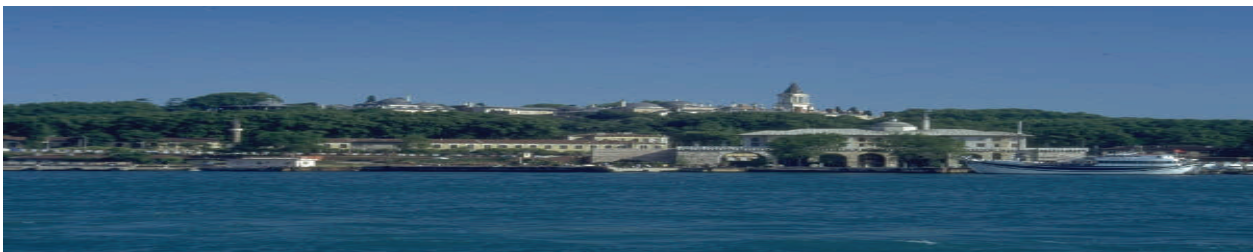

We encourage presentations from all disciplines and perspectives, focusing on, but not limited to: globalisation; religions & globalisation; non-violence & peace building; ethnic conflict resolution; the changing nature of warfare; peace & conflict in a post-9/11 world; women, children, conflict & peace; religion, conflict & peace-building; the role of media in war-making & peacekeeping; the economics of war & peace; international law, cross-cultural & inter-faith dialogue; the role of education in peace-making; the path to becoming a peace-maker; forgiveness, reconciliation & conflict resolution; pandemic disease, aids, global warming, environmental degradation & violent conflict; the role of human rights & democracy in cultivating peace, dialogue, dispute resolution; social change & non-violence; sustainable development, ecological balance, community revitalization, reflective practice, intercultural relations, grassroots movements & organisational transformation; poverty reduction, peace, justice & conflict resolution; the creation of a culture of peace through tourism; faith & economic life; spiritual business, capital & peace making; selfishness, greed, materialism & violent conflict; moral economy, fairness, compassion, responsibility & conflict resolution; youth leadership, conflict resolution & peace-making.

You are invited to submit a one-page abstract of your paper, which should include a working title, the author's discipline and field, address, institutional affiliation and email address.* Please send your abstract by March 15, 2007 to Dr. Kamran Mofid and Dr. Gokhan Bacik: K.mofid@btopenworld.com and gbacik@fatih.edu.tr

A dedicated conference website is under construction. It will include various details about the symposium, including academic panels, workshops and seminars, the names of the international and Turkish Board of Advisors and Organising Committee, as well as information about social/cultural/sightseeing tours and the cost of attending the conference. Please note that travel arrangements and costs are the responsibility of the attendee, and the Conference Organisers unfortunately are not able to offer financial support. However, the overall costs will be highly subsidised, enabling many to attend. In the meantime, please do not hesitate to contact us with any questions that you might have.

With warmest regards and best wishes,
Kamran Mofid and Gokhan Bacik

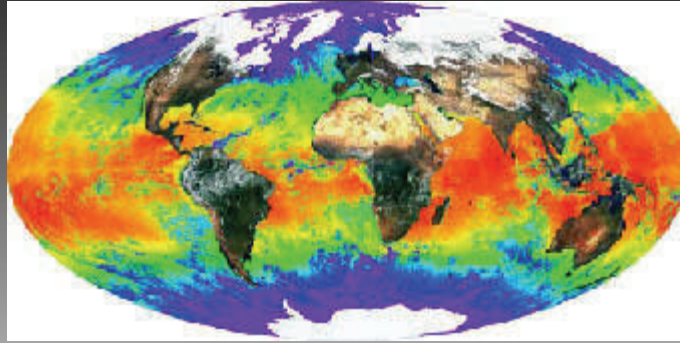

* Note: the Conference Committee reserves the right to refuse permission to participate without explanation.
